Glowing Halo Cloud Over Moscow Creates UFO Buzz

KTLA News
3:06 p.m. CDT, October 14, 2009

MOSCOW -- This picture of a donut-shaped cloud in the skies above Moscow has the internet world buzzing.

Millions witnessed an ominous ring-shaped cloud appear over Moscow's western districts, prompting citizens to stop in their tracks to record the phenomenon and put it on YouTube.

Some think it's a UFO.

Others say it must have been photo-shopped or digitally enhanced.

But now a spokesperson with the Moscow weather department says the explanation is quite simple.

They say the formation is a cloud formed by an intrusion of arctic air and the sun shining from the west.

TOP news stories

Big, beautiful homes no one wants
Man fatally dismembered in hit-run

Recommended for you:

Letterman says he was target of extortion attempt over relationships with female staffers
1 dead, 2 hurt in Edens crash
Tom Skilling: Snow possible by Monday
Dolton cop caught on camera in student's beating is in jail on rape charge
FBI arrests Westmont man in ESPN nude video case mmmmm...

How about 10 UFO aircraft hiding in the clouds, monitoring the operation of nuclear power plants and facilities. :)??

DownUnder-in-DE (10/15/2009, 4:08 PM)

This is going to take away attention from my bigfoot video I was just about to release!

Notice in the video the cars are not even hitting the brakes and slowing to take a look as they drive by.

MTW48 (10/14/2009, 10:50 PM)

In Soviet Russia, UFO watches you!

Weadude (10/14/2009, 8:55 PM)

See All comments