

Subject: Strange Clouds at the Edge of Space

From: NASA Science News <snglist@lyris.msfc.nasa.gov>

Date: Mon, 25 Aug 2008 14:00:14 -0500

To: NASA Science News <snglist@lyris.msfc.nasa.gov>

NASA Science News for August 25, 2008

High above Earth, astronauts on board the International Space Station have taken one of the best-ever photos of electric-blue noctilucent clouds. Their image, featured in today's story from Science@NASA, highlights a growing mystery: Where do these clouds come from and why are they spreading?

FULL STORY at

http://science.nasa.gov/headlines/y2008/25aug_nlc.htm?list168735

Check out our RSS feed at <http://science.nasa.gov/rss.xml!>

You are currently subscribed to snglist as: info@californiaskywatch.com.

This is a free service.

To unsubscribe click here: <http://lyris.msfc.nasa.gov/u?id=168735S&n=T&l=snglist> or send a blank email to leave-snglist-168735S@lyris.msfc.nasa.gov